

「May Sunshine(Satsukibare)」

My name is Chihiro Tanaka.
I am graduate school of agriculture.
I am an adjunct teacher at high school.

Let me tell you about the charm of this flower.
Her name is May Sunshine (Satsukibare).
My first encounter with her was at Meiji Shrine.
I went to Meiji shrine on a hot summer day. She appealed to me to「look at me!». It sounds like to me. Many of her Edo type lived there. I found it disconcerting that it was blooming at a different time of year than its name. She doesn't seem to mind.

She is very showy. She was the only one who was light red on a white background while all around her was purple. There was a little yellow line, which accented it. A straight line without hesitation. She was a flat bloomer and made her presence known by spreading her arms out to the fullest.
I wish I could be like her. I will go back and see her next year.

Well, that's all I have to say about the teacher. See you the next class!!
