

The North Wind and the Sun

The North Wind and the Sun begin a fight.

The North Wind says, "I am strong."

The Sun says, "No, you are not. I am strong."

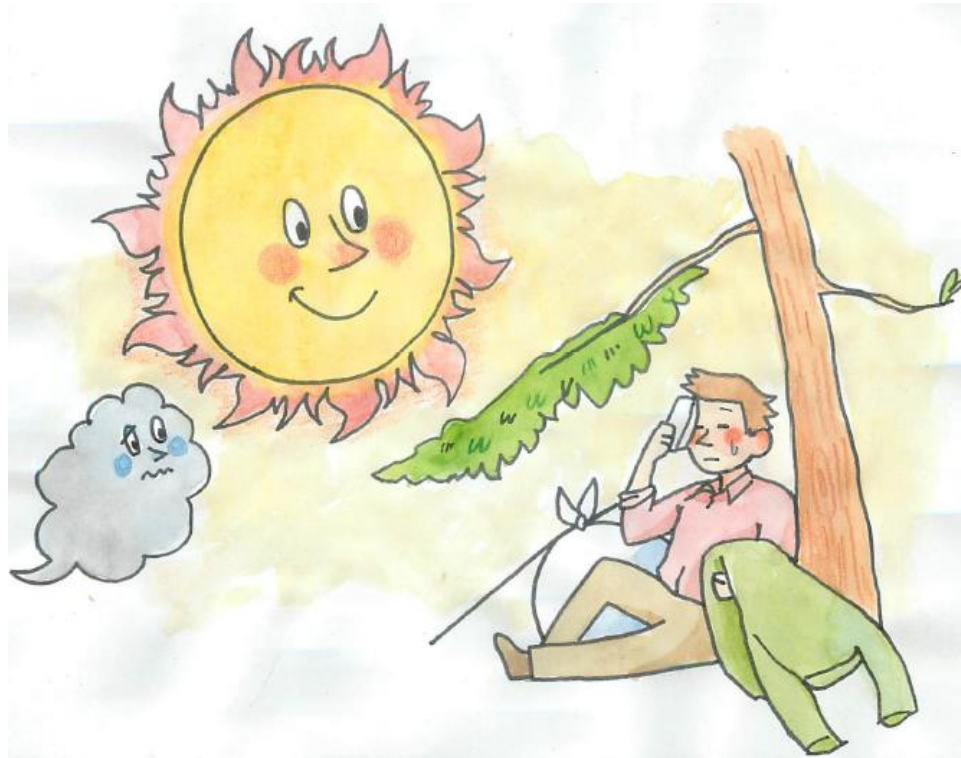

“Look at the traveler on the road. I can strip the traveler of his coat. Can you do it?” the Sun asks.

“Of course, I can,” The North Wind says.

The North Wind sends a cold wind. The Wind blows very hard, but the traveler holds his coat tightly. The Wind gives up.

Then the Sun shines. It becomes very warm.

“I’m hot,” the traveler says.

At last, the traveler takes off his coat and sits down under a big tree by the road.
